FUND MANAGER'S COMMENT

The typical portfolio registered a return of 1.94% in December, which was higher than the benchmark FBM KLCI return of 0.13%. The KLCI demonstrated a marginal month-on-month increase of 0.1% to reach 1,455 points on December 23, concluding the year with a positive trend for the third consecutive month. This served to mitigate the overall decline for 2023 to 2.7%. In December 23, foreign investors maintained their net buying position with net inflows of RM0.3 billion. However, this represented an 83.5% decrease from the buy flow observed in November 23, which stood at RM1.6 billion. In contrast, local institutional investors turned net sellers in December 23, recording a net sell flow of RM56.2 million. This marked a substantial 96.2% month-on-month decline from the net sell flow of RM1.5 billion in November 23, signifying the first instance in 2023 where local institutions exhibited net selling for two months. Out of Bursa Malaysia's 13 sectorial indices, nine recorded gains. Noteworthy performers included Utilities (up by +7.3%, led by YTL Power), Healthcare (up by +6.9%, driven by Gloves), and Construction (up by +3.3%). Conversely, Energy (-1.4%), Consumer (-1.3%), and Plantation (-0.5%) were the three sectors with the lowest performance. Key events for the month that is worth highlighting was the maiden visit by Nvidia CEO to Malaysia, which propelled the sharp share price gains of YTL/YTL on AI infrastructure collaboration between the two; as well as the strong Healthcare sector gains on the back of upwards EPS revision, though we are of the view that optimism surrounding the sector may be a case of "too early to tell" as channel checks showed that oversupply situation still persists, while current valuations are pricing in a very strong net profit recovery for the sector.

Heineken was the top performing stock in December, gaining 9.0% in the month. The top loser was Hong Leong Industries, falling by 1.4%.
