FUND MANAGER'S COMMENT

Data as of 31 August 2026

Regional and global markets improved in August as easing expectations of near-term US monetary tightening and strong corporate earnings supported risk appetite. The MSCI Asia Pacific ex-Japan Index gained 3.0%, outperforming the MSCI World Index's 2.5% increase, with market leadership concentrated in Taiwan and South Korea amid continued optimism over AI infrastructure spending, semiconductor demand and positive earnings revisions. Improved foreign inflows and resilient export growth further supported technology-oriented Asian economies. Nevertheless, performance remained uneven across the region, with the Philippines, Thailand, India and Hong Kong declining amid domestic growth concerns and cautious investor sentiment. Inflation risks also remained relevant, particularly for energy-importing economies, while regional central banks continued to balance growth support against currency volatility and potential price pressures.

Against this backdrop, investment opportunities remain increasingly differentiated by earnings visibility, balance-sheet resilience and exposure to structural growth themes. We continue to favour companies benefiting from sustained AI and digital-infrastructure investment, including semiconductor supply chains, power infrastructure, grid modernisation and data-centre development. At the same time, persistent geopolitical uncertainty, elevated global bond yields, energy price volatility and unresolved US tariff risks warrant a measured approach to portfolio construction. We therefore maintain a preference for high-quality businesses with durable cash flows and clear earnings visibility.
